Wild weekend's weather

By Josh Thompson

As the storms rolled in Friday night and early weekend morning, torrential rain and a surfeit of rain storms Monday morning, the area residents expect a few days of sunshine next week.

Monday’s morning hail storm, which struck shortly after 8 a.m., was the first of last week’s storm that flooded dozens of streets and freeways lanes and left hundreds of South Chino residents frustrated by closed roads.

Dozens of people took pictures and videos of the hail-covered streets and posted on local social media pages. During the storm, an eight-inch crack left the southbound 71 Freeway at Grand Avenue, forcing drivers to circle around, the California Highway Patrol said.

Last Sunday’s 3.93 inches of rain, was the greatest one-day total in at least, 12 years, and brought January’s accumulation to 9.86 inches, the weather month began December 2019. That month, 10.89 inches of rain dropped Chino and Chino Hills.

Since Sept. 1, the Chino Valley has received 42.13 inches of rain, including 4.79 inches last month. Average annual rainfall in Chino Valley since 1961 is 10.83 inches.

School board assigns bond priorities
